The South China Morning Post is moving beyond a broadsheet.

As this 115-year-old newspaper evolves into a global media company, the South China Morning Post is now available across various channels, platforms, and formats.

As we embark on a digital transformation, the way we create new editorial products is constantly evolving, and it’s so much more than just shrinking text down to a five-inch screen. As consumer behaviours change at an accelerated pace, and as discovery options expand beyond traditional channels, we are committed to bringing our world-class journalism to our readers anywhere, anytime, and on any device.

Headquartered in Hong Kong, our teams span across Asia and the United States, working together to connect with news consumers around the world. We are committed to informing and inspiring through journalism of the highest standards.

Our vision is to “Elevate Thought” and our mission is to “Lead the global conversation about China.”

We develop news content 24/7, driven by world-class journalists, editors, visual artists, photographers and videographers, all guided by the principle of “Truth and Fairness”. Our editorial teams are powered by emerging digital technologies that allow us to tell Asia’s most important and compelling stories in innovative ways.

We look forward to the next chapter, turning a New Page with the conviction that media can inspire and Elevate Thought, each and every day.
Charting China’s rise as a global power has emerged as one of the biggest, if not the biggest, story of the 21st Century.

China is currently the world’s second largest economy, expected to overtake the United States as the largest in the next decade. China’s digital economy is booming, driven by technological innovation and an Internet user base exceeding the population of Europe. It is now home to more than one-third of the world’s unicorns -- those private companies valued at more than US$1 billion.

US President Donald Trump has focused on a US First strategy, offering China the opportunity to take a leadership position on the global stage. It already has been stepping up in supporting initiatives such as free trade and combating climate change.

In a world facing increasing tension around misinformation and miscommunication, much of the divide comes from a lack of understanding of the other side. That’s why we want to tell the China story and explain its relevance and implications to our readers in a truthful, fair and balanced way.

The South China Morning Post has been the most authoritative voice reporting on China and Asia for more than a century. Our unique home base – Hong Kong – allows us to have in-depth understanding of the China story from an insider’s perspective, while enjoying a high level of freedom and independence granted by the city’s special constitutional principle of “One country, two systems”.

Today, our 115-year-old newspaper enters a new era with a new look and new identity. Our editorial principles require us to report with accuracy in a fair and balanced way, and we do not shy away from controversy. We commit to bringing you, to explaining to you, the best quality China story in the cutting edge formats that you, our readers, demand.

Tammy Tam
Editor-in-Chief, South China Morning Post
NEW POSSIBILITIES

The possibilities for journalism continue to expand, and our investments in digital technologies and research will allow the Post to lead in engaging reportage. New media formats, unrestricted by the dimensions of print, give us wide canvases on which to tell compelling stories. Data intelligence gives our coverage more depth and accuracy. And our growing video capabilities will allow the world to see and understand China with more texture and colour.

The news industry is truly at an inflection point, and we are in a challenging yet exhilarating position to define the future of media. We are committed to New Possibilities through innovation, so that our readers can understand the world in more meaningful ways.

After over a century of reporting on China, SCMP is proud to launch new platforms that offers our global audience a window on the rapid innovation in this part of the world.

Abacus (www.abacusnews.com) is all about China tech for the rest of the world. Once, China just built the rest of the world’s products. Now they’re building their own, coming up with new solutions to serve an enormous population at home. But what does that mean for everyone else?

Based in Hong Kong, the city that blends East and West, we’ll bring you all the latest news, reviews and plenty of video showing what’s happening in consumer technology in China. But we aim to go beyond the headlines to bring you a deeper context, breaking down who the big players are in China’s tech scene and how they rose to prominence.

As Chinese technology grows and spreads, so does the need to understand what’s driving it. That’s our goal.
Inkstone is a daily multimedia digest of China-focused stories that will give you unique, unvarnished insight into a rising potential superpower.

From elite politics to business and technology and what’s buzzing in social media, plus all the human stories that get under the skin of a country changing faster than any other in history.

We’ll bring it all to you in an easily digestible, curated daily report.

Available on the web (www.inkstonenews.com), via mobile app (Apple, Google) and through a daily curated newsletter, Inkstone provides a new perspective on today’s China, its relationship with the United States and why this all matters.

Weaving through the stories of Chinese people

Goldthread (www.goldthread2.com) is lovingly crafted stories shot in China & made in Hong Kong by multilingual reporters & artists who love the internet.
